Tom Leman, 16

Being a teenager can be a stressful but joyful time. From friends and family to exams and breakups, one should proceed with caution when navigating the teenage mind. Knowing your place in society as a teenager can be difficult. Being treated as a young adult but still restricted by childhood rules can be confusing. Although the enjoyment of freedom can come with being a teenager, it is often hard to get your voice heard.

Yasmeen El-Mansoor, 16

I want older people to see that we're not just teenagers, we're a frustrated future. We are really the ones facing climate change and all the natural disasters that come with it. Something the older generations have caused. It is said we only have 20 years to save our Earth before all the damage becomes irreversible. Are you worried about the youth? Address climate change now.

Saleem Akhtar, 16

Adults, mothers, fathers, carers, we may not act like we need your support, but we do. We sometimes need to be told we can do it, and that you're proud of us. Be proud. Being proud of someone needs to be spoken, especially if the person you're proud of is younger than you, because we do look up to you for guidance, support, and everything else.

Jane Stapley, 15

The main cause of today's teens turning to drugs and alcohol is stress. Today's teens are able to get hold of drugs more easily than ever. So many adolescents advertise their drugs on their Snapchat stories, for all their audience to see. Many young lives are being ripped apart due to early substance dependence. Government officials who choose to deny the serious issue of substance abuse within the young community are denying young people their future.

Dimeji Sosimi, 17

Delinquents, hooligans, ruffians. This is how I think older people view teenagers. They seem to think that teenagers have been brought up with no manners or any sense of appropriate behaviour. All teenagers are being given a bad name because of the actions of a few teenagers. It is such a shame because most of us are not troublemakers. We do have respect. We do have good manners. We do not all get in trouble with the law, miss school and pick fights with everyone we see.

ACTIVITY B

Going through adolescence can often be hard and troublesome, but teen years are truly valuable and unforgettable.

Being a teenager is great because it is the only time of our life when we find a happy medium between childhood and adulthood. We can blame our immaturity for the childish things that we do but still use the 'I am almost an adult' card when convenient. Other times, we can enter the adult life without having to take on all the responsibilities that come with it.

Teen years come with exploration opportunities, too. It is absolutely acceptable for teens to change their hairdos or fashion style whenever they feel like it because they have to try it all, before they find one that depicts their true selves. We call those periods of change 'phases' and we all go through them, no matter how embarrassing it is to look back at them.

For some, teenage years are the peak of their lifetimes, which is understandable. Your teen years are filled with your 'firsts': your first concert, first real relationship, first car, etc. There are lots of exciting things you can look forward to in the period of adolescence. During adulthood, our lives usually normalize and revolve around a routine; therefore, there is not much room for excitement.

What is also great about being a teenager is that you finally have freedom and control over your life. Your parents let you make decisions on your own and there is more flexibility in taking on a hobby and hanging out with friends. And you have more room to make mistakes. Chances are that you won't be penalized for not knowing better, because you haven't fully developed your common sense yet. Therefore, adolescence is a learning experience, which can be viewed as practice before you are launched into the real world on your own.

Another perk of being a teenager is that you probably are in the best shape you will ever be as your metabolism is at its highest. Now, enjoy it while you can and say yes to that dessert!

As teenagers, one thing that we talk about yearlong is summer! However, a time will come when summer is not going to differ that much from all the other seasons, so this is also one of the best things about being a teenager.
